Exterminator charged in murder of CHOP doc

Jason Smith was arrested for the murder of Melissa Ketunuti, who was strangled and set on fire in her Center City home Monday afternoon Fight escalated as he was servicing home, say police Levittown man has no violent criminal history

Police on Thursday made an arrest in the murder of 35-year-old Children's Hospital of Philadelphia doctor Melissa Ketunuti, who was on Monday afternoon strangled to death and her body set on fire in the basement of her Center City home.

But the development did not provide many answers regarding a motive in the brutal crime. Police said 36-year-old Levittown exterminator Jason Smith, who lacked a violent criminal history, attacked Ketunuti in her basement after the two got into an argument. "She needed an exterminator; she called a certain service, he was subcontracted out," Capt. James Clark of the Homicide Unit said. "During the course of him servicing her, they got into some type of argument. It went terribly wrong."

He did not say what that argument was about, only that it quickly escalated. "There was a verbal altercation and with that, he struck her," Clark said. "She went to the ground. He immediately jumped on top of her and started strangling her."

▶ Jason Smith, 36, of Levittown, was taken into custody by Philadelphia Homicide Unit detectives, U.S. Marshals and Bristol police.

RICARD LARMA/METRO

He said Smith bound Ketunuti's hands and feet behind her at some point and allegedly strangled her using rope he found in the basement. "We did find rope similar to that in the house," Clark said, referring to a search of the Levittown home Smith shares with his girlfriend and her young child.

Investigators believe he set the body on fire in an attempt to destroy DNA evidence. Smith is charged with murder, abuse of a corpse, arson and risking a catastrophe.

Family traveling to Philadelphia

Ketunuti's parents have been experiencing some difficulty in returning to the country from Thailand, according to Clark, but are currently en route. "We're glad for the family we're at least able to give some closure with the arrest of this individual," he said.

District Attorney Seth Williams in a statement echoed Clark's sentiments. "I would first like to send my thoughts and prayers to the family, friends and neighbors of Melissa Ketunuti," he said. "I know their pain must be enormous and I hope that today's arrest will help ease some of that pain."

How police caught the suspect

Investigators caught up with Smith following a thorough review of footage from nearby cameras. "They went through hours of surveillance video," Clark said.

"Detectives did an unbelievable job of finding every bit of footage that was in that area. And what we saw was the suspect actually following about 30 seconds behind the decedent down 18th Street and onto Naudain Street, which led us to him."

Clark said police also have video putting Smith at the scene after the crime.

"After the murder, we see him get back in his truck and go down Naudain Street twice," he said. "And obviously, that led us even more to the suspect."

Smith was brought to the Homicide Unit Wednesday night as a person of interest.

"He made a statement to detectives," Clark said. "And with that statement and other evidence, there's more than enough for us to charge him."

$528M

Last year, $528 million in city property taxes weren't collected due to charitable exemptions extended to nonprofits, according to Councilwoman Blondell Reynolds Brown, who on Thursday announced a hearing to investigate such exemptions. Brown said that when it comes to raising city revenue, increasing wage and corporate taxes threaten to drive businesses out of the city, jeopardizing jobs. "Therefore, for three years in a row, our remaining option on the table has been property taxes," she said, noting that private property owners shoulder the burden. METRO

Beaten Rangers fan to sue attacker, South Philly bar

Neal Auricchio, the Rangers fan who was brutally beaten by a Flyers fan after last year's NHL winter classic in Philadelphia, announced yesterday that he is filing a civil suit for unspecified damages. Auricchio, an officer with the Woodbridge, New Jersey Police, is seeking compensatory and punitive damages against Dennis Veteri and South Philly Bar and Grill, Inc., where Veteri had signed a $226.70 tab 20 minutes before the assault.

While disappointed that Veteri was not sentenced to prison, Auricchio said that he was filing the lawsuit because "fan on fan has become epidemic."

Auricchio, who was awarded the Purple Heart in Iraq, extended his thanks to the city. "I want to thank the Philadelphia Police Department," he said during the press conference at the office of his Philadelphia counsel, Saltz Mongeluzzi, Barrett, & Bendesky, P.C. "The Philadelphia sports community has been very supportive. I received many e-mails telling me that this is not what Philly sports fans are about."

Laura Goldman
letters@metro.us

The attacker

Veteri, the Flyers fan who assaulted Auricchio, was sentenced in December to house arrest after pleading guilty to simple and aggravated assault and conspiracy.

The damages

Auricchio's New Jersey legal counsel, Raymond Gill Jr., could not put a dollar figure on the damages that Auricchio is seeking because "we still do not know all the medical care that he will need."

He noted that Auricchio still suffers from post-concussion syndrome, which causes headaches, tinnitus, trouble concentrating and memory difficulties. He also needed a titanium plate inserted to repair the fracture of the left eye's orbit.

Auricchio emphasized that he did not suffer just physical damages in the attack.

"The tickets to the Winter Classic and Rangers Jersey were a Christmas gift from my wife," he noted.

"I had a 2-week-old baby home. I was not able to hold him or bathe him for 9 months. I did not trust myself to carry him for a year."

Council tries again at paid sick leave bill

Bill would extend paid sick leave to all Philadelphia workers ◗ Health of both employees and public cited ◗ Similar legislation was previously vetoed Councilman Bill Greenlee on Thursday reintroduced the Healthy Families and Workplaces Bill, which would extend paid sick leave to all Philadelphia workers.

"In this economy, we need to make sure that people can afford to stay home when they or a loved one are sick without fear of falling behind on bills or losing their job," Greenlee said. "No working person in Philadelphia should be forced to choose between their family's economic security and their family's health."

Though similar legislation was in 2011 vetoed by Mayor Michael Nutter, who expressed concerns that it would compromise Philadelphia's competitiveness in attracting employers, some business owners said the opposite.

"My business operates on tight margins, and I've found that offering paid sick time to my employees is a policy that boosts my bottom line," said Lori Davis of Porter's Childcare in North Philadelphia. "When one of my employees is sick, I want them to stay home, recover and come back focused and ready to work. Turnover is a huge cost for a business, and training new employees is expensive."

Greenlee said he's confident there's enough support among council members for a veto override. "It's not just a business issue," he said. "I'm not trying to knock the business and economic issue, but we've also got to consider the health issue here. Health is something a lot of people talk about, and I think this is something that is really important to the health not just of the workers, but to the general citizens of Philadelphia."

Alex Wigglesworth
awigglesworth@metro.us

Breakdown

The bill would allow employees a minimum of one hour of paid sick time for every 40 hours worked, with a mandatory maximum of 56 paid sick hours per year.

Workers at businesses that employ between five and 11 employees would earn a mandatory maximum of 32 hours of paid sick time in a year.

Businesses with five or fewer employees are exempt from the bill.

Connecticut already passed a similar law.

Senate hearing heaps praise on secretary of state pick John Kerry

Sen. John Kerry received backslaps and lavish praise from his Senate colleagues at a hearing on Thursday that left little doubt he will win easy confirmation as secretary of state. Jobless claims hit five-year low

The number of Americans filing new claims for unemployment benefits unexpectedly fell to its lowest since the early days of the 2007-09 recession, a hopeful sign for the sluggish labor market. REUTERS

5K Claims fell by 5,000 to a seasonally adjusted 330,000, the lowest level since January 2008.

Obama to tap former federal prosecutor to head SEC

President Barack Obama on Thursday nominated former federal prosecutor Mary Jo White to head the Securities and Exchange Commission, picking a tough enforcement hand who more recently has defended Wall Street figures.

White, the former U.S. attorney for the Southern District of New York known for prosecuting terrorists and mob bosses, would become the third consecutive woman to hold the post.

The pick quickly drew praise from both Wall Street and reform advocates who say White would ably steer the powerful agency that plays a key role in overseeing U.S. financial markets. REUTERS

Davos divided on tackling obesity

Obesity, a major factor in diabetes and heart disease, imposes costs on both public and private sectors and is a drag on economic growth — but business leaders meeting in Davos can't agree on what they can or should do to address it.

The World Economic Forum has some notable past achievements in healthcare, but tackling the rise in obesity promises to be a much more complicated task. REUTERS

N. Korea to target US with nuclear testing

DIGITALGLOBE VIA GETTY IMAGES

This satellite image of the Punggye-ni Nuclear Test Facility in North Korea, collected on Oct. 29, 2012, confirms reports that new construction is under way within the facility. Piles of dirt and other materials, called spoils, can be seen in the image.

North Korea said on Thursday it would carry out further rocket launches and a nuclear test that would target the United States, dramatically stepping up its threats against a country it called its "sworn enemy."

The announcement by the country's top military body came a day after the U.N. Security Council agreed to a U.S.-backed resolution to censure and sanction North Korea for a rocket launch in December that breached U.N. rules.

North Korea is not believed to have the technology to deliver a nuclear warhead capable of hitting the continental United States, although its December launch showed it had the capacity to deliver a rocket that could travel 6,200 miles, potentially putting San Francisco in range, according to an intelligence assessment by South Korea.

North Korea is believed by South Korea and other observers to be "technically ready" for a third nuclear test, and the decision to go ahead rests with leader Kim Jong-un. REUTERS

"We are not disguising the fact that the various satellites and long-range rockets that we will fire, and the high-level nuclear test we will carry out, are targeted at the United States."

Pentagon lifts US ban on women in combat

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Women serve in combat roles for the armed forces of a few developed nations, including Canada and Israel.

The Pentagon lifted its ban on women in front-line combat roles on Thursday in a historic step toward gender equality in the U.S. armed forces after 11 years of nonstop war, during which the front lines were often not clearly defined.

Defense Secretary Leon Panetta and General Martin Dempsey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, signed an order rescinding the rule that prevented women from serving in direct combat jobs.

"They serve, they're wounded and they die right next to each other. The time has come to recognize that reality," Panetta said, noting that 152 women in uniform had been killed in Iraq and Afghanistan. REUTERS

TICK, TICK GOES THE WHITE HOUSE

Advice

TOM FOREMAN

POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN

letters@metro.us

CNN=POLITICS

While President Obama was looking out over that ocean of cheering fans at his inauguration, I was looking at my watch. I was not being rude, but acknowledging a political fact: The minutes are already ticking down on his presidency.

That may sound cruel, partisan or flat-out impossible, considering recent successes that have Democrats crowing and Republicans crying. But for all of the president's grand ambitions to tackle tax reform, immigration and gun laws, a daunting calendar could undermine even his best efforts in the short and long run.

First, there are the mid-term elections. In 2014 (that's right, next year) the Democrats have to defend 20 seats in the U.S. Senate, seven of which are in states that President Obama lost to Governor Romney. Democrats in many of those races, who must win moderate votes to keep their chairs, may be hesitant to stand too close to the president if he tacks left on divisive issues. And with the Republicans running the House, a Senate with too many squishy Democrats could doom many of his legislative hopes.

Second, there is the 2016 presidential race. Yes, I know it is far too early to talk about this. I'd rather take a cheese grater to my scalp. But presidential campaign seasons have steadily expanded in recent decades, so much so that both parties will be triangulating a path to victory the moment the mid-term vote is past, if not earlier. That will bring furious attacks on the president from one side of the aisle, and on the other … well, let's just say that the minute the next race heats up, the Capitol kitchen starts serving lame duck.

Quoted

So how long does the president have to make his mark in this second term?

So how long does the president have to make his mark in this second term? I've chatted up some of the best political minds I know, and they put it at about 18 months. Perhaps less. After that, like Beyonce, Barack Obama might be mouthing the words — but neither party may be listening.

WEEKEND

The COMEBACK of the COMEBACK

All of these musicians have decided after long hiatuses that 2013 is the year for them to release new music

Artist	Years in hibernation	Peak	Scheduled return	Welcome back?
David Bowie	10	It was 1973, but then again in 1983.	When he posted the new song "Where Are We Now" online late one night this month, many of the people at his label didn't even have a clue. "The Next Day," his 24th(!) studio album, drops in March.	Whether he's the Thin White Duke, Ziggy or just himself, Bowie is the type of artist whose space oddity is always welcome.
My Bloody Valentine	21	"Loveless," their 1991 album, set the tone for the shoegaze movement and basically enabled Smashing Pumpkins to be Smashing Pumpkins.	The follow-up album to "Loveless" is reportedly finished and will be released at some point this year. If you've stuck by them for more than two decades, you can wait a few more months.	Though MBV toured in '07, and were as ear-bleedingly rad as ever, there's always a fear of a "Chinese Democracy"-type disappointment. But frontman Kevin Shields seems like he's still on his A-game.
The Postal Service	10	They reached such great heights with "Such Great Heights" in 2003. The song was featured on the "Garden State" soundtrack ... and just about everywhere else.	The re-issue of their only album, "Give Up," will be released in April, to be followed by a tour.	Our little twee ears are eagerly awaiting the two new songs that will be included with this album, so yes!
Eve	11	In 2002, she won the first Grammy for Best Rap/Sung Collaboration for "Let Me Blow Ya Mind" with Gwen Stefani.	Her album, "Lip Lock" drops in May.	Eve has a scorpion-like sting to her raps and when she released a taste of "Lip Lock" in October with "She Bad Bad," its dub-step conscious production made it clear she has not spent 11 years under a rock.
Destiny's Child	8	"Survivor," 2001. Enough said.	The album "Love Songs" is out Tuesday. This reunion seemed like a favor to help get Beyonce's buddies some extra dough, but now it seems more of a favor they're doing for her to distract us from that whole Star Scandal Banner thing.
Biz Markie	9	Oh bay-bee, Biz had what we neeeeeeed(ed) in 1989. But that song has endured in commercials and on "Always Sunny" and he has enjoyed a second life on "Yo Gabba Gabba" with Biz's Beat of the Day.	While there is no release date, the rapper says he is in the studio now.	While we can't say we've been exactly clamoring for new material from the Biz, he did recently tell Billboard, "It's going to be timeless." So there's that.
Boyz II Men	These guys have been putting out albums consistently, but a new joint tour is their most high profile outing since ...	"Motown Philly" was everywhere in 1994.	A tour with NKOTB and 98 Degrees kicks off on May 31.	A nostalgia tour is the best move for this creatively sapped crew.
Adam Ant	17	"Goody Two Shoes" was a hit in 1982, which is before many of you were even born.	It's scheduled for late 2013.	Stateside, Mr. Ant wasn't ever popular enough to warrant calling this a "comeback." One slot on a casino-venue nostalgia tour would've done it justice. PAT HEALY & HEIDI PATALANO

Artist: Justin Timberlake

- Number of years in hibernation: 7
- Peak: Has he stopped peaking? We'll just say 2006.
- Scheduled return: He's got a Super Bowl weekend gig (not the half time show), "Suit and Tie" single is out now and his third album is due later this year.
- Welcome Back? Yes. A thousand times, yes.

'Movie 43'

In something of an attempt to take on the comedy shorts that have been killing it on sites like Funny or Die and My Damn Channel, the Farrelly brothers produce (and direct a segment of) this collection of vignettes, tied together with the story of three teenagers on a quest to find the most taboo movie of all time. The movie features a staggering amount of celebrities — it's nice to see this kind of stunt casting applied to something besides a Garry Marshall cheesefest.

'Parker'

We know, we know: Jason Statham in an action movie might be a little hard to get used to — if you haven't seen the 20-plus actions movies he's already done. This guy is more willingly typecast than even Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson, who displayed his range with "Tooth Fairy" at least. Still, the British action star is never too hard on the eyes, much like his co-star Jennifer Lopez. The two play scheming thieves in this thriller directed by Taylor Hackford.

'Hansel and Gretel: Witch Hunters'

Like "Snow White and the Huntsman," this reinvention of the Brothers Grimm fairy tale gets a gritty update. This time, the siblings who suffered as children at the hands of a candy house-dwelling witch are grown up and ready to avenge the wrongdoings of witches the world over. Gemma Arterton and Jeremy Renner play the titular pair.

The last action hero

FILM DISTRICT

Q&A

You got your start in competitive diving. What do you make of the trend in celebrity diving shows?
Is it popular now? I need to see that. People are going to get f—ing hurt. Who'd have thought it, because it was a f—ing tiny sport when I was doing it. And it still is, as far as I know. It doesn't put together big crowds — apart from the Olympics, and that's only every four years. ... Back when I started, nobody knew what f—ing diving was.

With "Parker," Jason Statham continues his bid to be 21st century answer to his "Expendables" co-stars Sylvester Stallone and Arnold Schwarzenegger, a purveyor of action films that can be big and loud but don't have to be dumb. His latest finds him as a crafty crook with a surprisingly strict moral code — even when faced with the likes of Jennifer Lopez.

Do you consider this in the same vein as things like "The Mechanic" and "The Italian Job," putting a modern spin on older action material?
You wouldn't be far wrong in saying that. Parker's a different sort of animal for me, though. He's a crook, he's a criminal, but there's something about him that makes you forgive what he's doing in some way, and I think there's an interesting aspect to that. You know, you're not supposed to like crooks or criminals. You know, he's devoted to his girlfriend. There's something about that, as well. Crooks and criminals usually haven't got many morals.

It's interesting, that girlfriend character, since you also have Jennifer Lopez in the movie and people would assume, you two together onscreen ...
You'd expect something. When's it going to go off? I know, some people will go, "Oh, I don't believe it, it's stupid. How could he resist? It's f—ing Jennifer Lopez. What, is he blind? Is he stupid?" But [director] Taylor [Hackford] was insistent on keeping this guy true to himself and him having a strength in departments where other men were weak. [Laughs]

"He's a man of his word. And that is something that people have to admire because, you know, I live in f—ing Hollywood. Your word doesn't mean much here, believe me."
JASON STATHAM

There aren't that many new action stars in the vein of your "Expendables" co-stars. How did you manage to become one?
I mean, to categorize myself in the same breath as Stallone and Arnold is a little bit beyond me, but I love their movies. I'm a big action movie junkie, and it's great to be making action movies. I think it's still the strongest genre and always has been. I think it gets a bad name for itself sometimes because sometimes they're a bit thin on story. ... But I love being in the action movie genre. It's fun, and it's better than doing period dramas back in England — for me, at least.

A GUIDING LIGHT

Choreographer Meg Foley's latest production takes its cues from the late-afternoon sun

ERIC ASHLEIGH

'The whole time in the meanwhile'
Through Sunday
Christ Church Neighborhood House, 20 N. American St., $12-$15, www.birdbirdbird.org

Filmmakers refer to it as "magic hour" — the time of day when the last rays of sunlight bathe the landscape in a vibrant, golden glow. Dancer/choreographer Meg Foley takes the elusive beauty of twilight as a point of departure for her new piece, "The whole time in the meanwhile," which sees its world premiere in a series of late-afternoon performances this weekend.

Foley created the piece with composer/guitarist Chris Forsyth and lighting designer Lenore Doxsee. The goal for the collaborators was to create an immersive environment for their audience.

"We're creating an environment that provides literal and figurative space for the viewer to reflect on what happens inside of it," Foley says. "We can't make the audience do anything, but we can work with light and sound as tangible, physical material and with shifting viewpoints, illuminating different areas of the room and highlighting the passage of time as creative materials."

The inspiration for this environment, according to Foley, came from her own desire to step inside other performers' work. "In the past few years I've increasingly found myself wanting to be inside the performances that I see," she says. "From my safe seat in the dark, I feel so far from what is transpiring, as if my body is just my eyes and ears."

'Spartacus' beats

The epic tale of rebellion enters its final episodes ◗ Liam McIntyre talks about stepping into the warrior's sandals for two seasons

Behind the stylized violence and impressively choreographed sex scenes that have made "Spartacus" the Starz network's must-see guilty pleasure is the story of a broken man fighting against all odds to regain respect and an everyman suffocating under Roman rule. For the past two seasons, Liam McIntyre has brought the legend of the title character to life: from suffering the pain of his wife's murder to seeking vengeance and bringing down an empire that thrived on the degradation of men. As this swords-and-sandals epic enters its final season, McIntyre reflects on the journey of playing such an iconic character.

How has Spartacus come into his own as a leader?

A lot of his drive has been from the love and loss that he's suffered. Now he has a new cause: He has all these people who look to him. His leadership skills have grown through his campaign and through his experience. His generals have supported him, and his numbers have grown in stature and strength. All that's left for him is this ultimate victory against Rome that will give the people their freedom. He realizes he won't have his life, but he can give other people theirs.

Spartacus is told that he's beginning to resemble a god to the people. How does that sit with him?

Yeah, it doesn't sit very well. He's not that kind of guy. He's been trapped in this massive war that's so far beyond anything he'd ever expected. He's fighting the odds in a very strong sense of the word. Because he's having so much success, to these people, he's like a savior to them. He's actually doing it — the impossible — which is to start beating back Rome and earn people their freedom.

Did you play the role of leader on the set?

It's funny that life imitates art. The producers sat me down and said, "Now you're the lead. You have to lead by example in every way. You've gotta be on time, you've gotta make sure people are doing their job." I'm like, "Wow, this is a much bigger job than I thought." [Laughs] As the ▶ Liam McIntyre stars as Spartacus. "Spartacus: War of the Damned" premieres Jan. 25 at 9 p.m. on Starz.

Q&A

What were those last days of filming like?
I remember Andy Whitfield [who originated the role of Spartacus, but died in 2011] told me that the team at "Spartacus" was like a giant family. He was absolutely right. I was watching the last episode and doing DVD commentary on it a couple days ago.

show progressed, it just became a natural thing. I'm not a boring guy, but I'm pretty straight laced. Spartacus tries to keep everyone on the straight and narrow and the right path. I guess, in a weird way, that's the role I ended up having on set as well. I'd be the guy who would try to rally the troops as best I could.

Weekend recipe

Asian-marinated baked chicken

Spending a few minutes preparing a handful of ingredients for a marinade gives this dish tons of flavor, plus the bonus of a built-in sauce after the chicken is cooked. Just combine soy sauce, ginger, garlic and a little brown sugar in a baking dish, add the chicken, and let it marinate in the fridge overnight.

When you're ready to cook it, put the whole dish in the oven, and in forty minutes you'll have crispy, saucy, flavorful chicken. (Note: If you're using a glass or ceramic baking dish, do not skip step 3 where you bring it up to room temperature before baking, or else your dish could crack!)

Serve with rice and a quick vegetable side dish.

Ingredients:

- ½ cup soy sauce
- ¼ cup packed dark brown sugar
- 3 tablespoons peeled and finely chopped fresh ginger
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped garlic (from about five medium cloves)
- 2 teaspoons toasted sesame oil
- 1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 3 pounds bone-in, skin-on chicken thighs, drumsticks, breasts, or a combination of all three

Directions:

1. Place everything except the chicken in a 13-by-9-inch broiler-proof baking dish and whisk to combine.
2. Lay the chicken in a single layer of the marinade and turn to coat. Cover, refrigerate and marinate at least 12 hours and up to 24 hours, turning the chicken at least once during that time.
3. Remove the chicken from the refrigerator and let it sit at room temperature for about 30 minutes. Meanwhile, heat the oven to 475°F and arrange a rack in the middle.
4. Turn all the chicken pieces skin-side-up in the dish. (If you're using drumsticks, just turn to recoat them in the marinade.) Bake until the chicken is starting to turn a dark brown color, about 40 minutes.
5. Set the oven to broil. Broil until the chicken skin is crisped, about three to five minutes more. Serve with the sauce on the side.

Game plan

If you're using chicken breasts for this recipe, cut them in half crosswise before putting them in the marinade so they'll cook at the same rate as the rest of the chicken pieces.

THE WORD

Dorothy Robinson's take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

The feed ...

Checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

The Word's readers react to the Beyonce lip-syncing flap. Consensus: They (almost all) don't care!

@cialwalls
I don't care if she lip-synced. It was still her voice and talent. There are more important things to worry about.

@GossipTidbits
Live singing at #inaugurations is expected! Aretha Franklin, Kelly Clarkson rocked out live! Lip-syncing feels deceptive

@therealjerry
Nope. Do not care. Celebs/musicians do it all the time at other events, like sports, so its not a big deal at all to me.

@v0xtheriot
if she can fake her baby bump she can fake her singing. Seriously though, most celebs lip sync. This is old news

@sarrible
Beyonce gets to do whatever she wants.

New couple alert? Tiger Woods and Lindsey Vonn

PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

▶ Tiger Woods is reportedly seeing Lindsey Vonn, inset.

According to the new issue of Star, golfer Tiger Woods and Olympic skier Lindsey Vonn are being all sorts of athletic together — in bed.

The magazine reports the two have been playing kissy face since November and have even gone on a vacation to Antigua together. The magazine also says this is a great match as Woods has a thing for blondes. (Editor's note: He also has a thing for redheads, and brunettes and, well, any woman, ever.) So, following the laws of tabloid magazines, this means they are totally going to end up married.

"He wants to marry again," an insider tells Star, "and thinks Lindsey could be the woman."

Which leads us to ask: How is Vonn's aim at SUV windows?

Speidi set sail for England

Watch out, England. Heidi Montag and Spencer Pratt are taking their nonsense across the pond, according to the Daily Star.

The couple, who were surprisingly unknown in the country before a starring role in "Celebrity Big Brother 11," have apparently enraptured the country with their vapid (yet strangely alluring) brand of reality TV vitriol.

"Speidi have been TV gold on 'Celebrity Big Brother' and are clearly no fans of the British," a source told the Daily Star. "It makes perfect sense for them to bag their own explosive series here."

According to the paper, the two will travel around the country making fun of the British people they encounter.

"It makes perfect sense for them to bag their own explosive series here."
DAILY STAR SOURCE, USING A DELIGHTFUL BRITISH COLLOQUIALISM

Poor England. They give us Judi Dench, Adele, Ian McKellen, Daniel Day Lewis and Dame Edna — and we're returning the favor with Heidi and Spencer. They're probably pretty pleased about how the Revolutionary War panned out by this point.

▶ Honestly? England can keep 'em.

Talking points

Lohan's latest rejected by SXSW, Sundance

Lindsay Lohan's latest bid at a big-screen comeback is having trouble getting off the ground. Her racy and controversial film "The Canyons" was rejected by the Sundance Film Festival earlier this month, and now it appears the South by Southwest festival in Austin, Texas, wants nothing to do with the film either, according the Hollywood Reporter. Sources say the film suffers from significant "quality issues" and has "an ugliness and a deadness to it."

Is Bell having a boy or a girl?

Kristen Bell seemed to hint during an interview with Ellen DeGeneres that she's going to give birth to a boy, but the "House of Lies" star kept coy with a "maybe" when pressed. Bell had said that fiance Dax Shepard was looking forward to "all the off-roading he'll have in this tiny partner," but she says that doesn't mean it couldn't be a daughter. "Do you have to be a boy to off-road? Absolutely not!" Bell said.

Dunham speaks out about Rihanna

"Girls" creator and star Lena Dunham is no stranger to criticism, but now she's going on the attack by chastising Rihanna for the messages the pop singer sends young fans with her behavior. "I just think about how many little girls beyond what I could even comprehend are obsessed with Rihanna," Dunham tells Alec Baldwin during a chat for his "Here's the Thing" podcast. "She gets back together with Chris Brown and posts a million pictures of them smoking marijuana together on a bed. And it cracks my heart in half."

Metro's week in review — in picture form

1 Beyonce's performance of the national anthem at the presidential inauguration on Monday may have been a lip-sync off a prerecorded track. Everyone the world over freaks out.

2 The final season of Starz hit "Spartacus: War Of The Damned" held its premiere party on Tuesday in Los Angeles. You can catch it on Jan. 25.

3 Sundance continues in Park City, Utah, featuring stars you've heard of promoting films you haven't. Here's Adam Scott at the "A.C.O.D" premiere on Wednesday.

4 Stars such as Carmen Electra, Chelsea Handler and Common partied at the premiere of the new film "Movie 43" on Wednesday in Hollywood. Jimmy Bennett was also there, along with this wax figure of Britney Spears.

5 Jennifer Lopez spent the week promoting her new film "Parker."

6 We finally saw the much-lauded "American Idol" fight between Mariah Carey and Nicki Minaj on Wednesday, which shut down the production on the show's audition rounds in Charlotte, N.C. It turns out the judges got into a fight over country music, with Minaj walking off, shouting, "Maybe I should just get off the f—ing panel," to which Mariah replied, "That was my move. I was gonna do that the next time she ragged on me." Here is Minaj earlier in the month at a season-premiere screening of the hit show.

Experiments in intimacy

David Hartley's latest release as Nightlands was created out of his fascination with an eight-track recorder 'Machinery is just a way to get to something more intimate,' says the War on Drugs member who also happens to be a local artist

Fishtown composer David Hartley (aka Nightlands) nearly named his latest album "Experiments With Tape Speed," but later found that title far too clinical. While the 10 tracks on "Oak Island" are indeed created out of his fascination with the simple manipulation of an eight-track recorder, to think of "Island" as a purely technical experiment would be to miss the point entirely.

Far from a detached process, Nightlands is fueled by Hartley's desire to transcend his own analytical nature.

"I still don't understand how other songwriters work. For me, writing a song has to be synced into the recording process or it never gets written," says Hartley. "If I sit down to write a song on the guitar, I get too far into self-reflection. For me that becomes an opening for doubt. If I can just trick myself into thinking I'm like a child at play with the equipment, I can banish the negative thoughts."

Hartley's life has changed considerably since Nightlands' 2010 debut, "Forget the Mantra," due mostly to the success of his other band, the War On Drugs. Over the past year, WOD has played larger venues, and even found their way onto the stages of Jimmy Fallon and David Letterman. But Hartley is not the songwriter in WOD, and he still looks to Nightlands to satisfy his creative itch.

And with no day job to speak of currently, Hartley is free to play with vintage audiotape for days at a time.

"Even with all my experimentation, I always want to keep the instrumentation organic. I don't use any this newfangled sequencing bulls—t. I want it to sound warm," he says. "I have no interest in making something alien or robotic. For me, the machinery is just a way to get to something more intimate."

Songza 'Girls'

Some girls think all the best rock 'n' roll was made between 1965 and 1984. Jessa is one of those girls. Or perhaps we should say she's one of those "Girls." The playlist at www.songza.com/ listen/girls-jessa-songza is inspired by the character on the HBO show, as are the other three lists for other "Girls" characters.

The Holland Tunnel at Fiume

Fiume, the cozy, understated bar located on 45th and Locust, just above the superb Ethiopian restaurant Abyssinia, has the most impressive and affordable whiskey list in Philadelphia — not to mention an awesome selection of bottled beer. And the bar plays fantastic music: We heard Ray Charles and Wire during a recent visit. In the past few months, Fiume's been stepping up its cocktail game, too, with an emphasis on whiskey drinks. One of the best is the Holland Tunnel, sold for $10. Cleverly named after guitar-picking barman Kevin Holland, it includes Rittenhouse Rye, Carpano Antica vermouth and a mix of ramazotti, angostura and black walnut bitters over a large rock. One will definitely enlighten you, but three will make you float.

Yumtown sandwiches

We don't have many worthwhile brunch spots in West Philly. But we do have the Clark Park Farmer's Market, open every Saturday. If you're typically too hungover to purchase fresh ingredients at the farmers market and make brunch, luckily there are food trucks around. Among them is Yumtown, which serves several spectacular sandwiches. We prefer the pork belly breakfast sandwich: a thin slice of seared belly with two fried eggs, cheddar cheese and kale. If that's too rich for you, try the Joy: beer-braised pulled pork with pickled jalapenos. And, even if you're not a vegetarian, order the Edgar Allen Potato. ELLIOTT SHARP

Funky Lil' Kitchen takes a road trip

The cozy Pottstown mainstay is for sale Chef Michael Falcone now on the hunt for a food truck

Hot Chef

At first glance, leaving behind a brick-and-mortar restaurant in favor of a food truck seems like a backslide. But after speaking with chef Michael Falcone, owner of the for-sale Funky Lil' Kitchen in Pottstown, you'll see the appeal of life on the road. When he finally gets his wheels, he's going to name his new mobile kitchen Heart — because that's where the best cooking comes from.

Falcone

So, we hear you're selling the restaurant in order to open a food truck instead?
Right now we don't have the truck because we wanted to do one thing at a time. The restaurant is up for sale, and once that sells hopefully we'll swing right into buying the truck.

What's appealing about the nomad lifestyle?
Funky Lil' Kitchen has been open for [more than eight] years and I think we ran our course here with what we can do and what we want to do. A truck gives us more flexibility. Obviously, we can go anywhere. If there's a festival that we want to go to, like Night Market, we can go.

Pottstown's great and all, but we're hoping you're parking in Philly.
Yeah, we'll be in with all the other trucks by Penn and Drexel, and we'll go to 33rd Street. Maybe we'll go to Love Park from time to time. We're going to split our time between Philly and Pottstown because of who we've met over the years. We know some great farmers, and we don't want to lose touch.

Horoscope

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Disappointment is likely if someone for whom you do a favor is unable to adequately express his or her thanks. You'll feel better if you don't expect anything.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. A burned child fears the fire, but you're not a kid anymore. Stop shunning a former collaborator just because he or she erred in the past. Be the bigger person and forgive and forget.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Because all your focus is placed on lofty objectives, it might be difficult for you to see the multitudes of lesser but still profitable opportunities. Remember, small things can add up.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Although a joint venture in which you're involved should be uppermost in your mind, this isn't likely to be the case. Diverting your attention elsewhere could dilute your efforts.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. There is a hard way to do things and an easy way. Even though you might recognize the difference, for some reason you'll make things tougher than they need to be.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. If you find yourself in the position of being unable to finalize an important project, don't make things worse by stewing over it. Let those fruits ripen a bit longer on the tree.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Remember, the mind is a remarkable mechanism for performing wonders. All you have to do is marshal your thinking to conquer doubt and accomplish whatever you wish.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Because of an inability to capitalize on a good opportunity, the biggest problem you'll have to contend with is accepting your shortcomings.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Even though you might be truly grateful to someone who does a favor for you, you might be unable to express your gratitude in a way that you feel is adequate. Nonetheless, do your best. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Washington: Our most misquoted president?

RE: "WASHINGTON WANTS YOU FOR THE UNITED STATES MILITIA" (METRO, JAN. 24) Letter writer Andrew Criscione is the one who needs a crash course: He claims Washington said, "A free people ought not only to be armed and disciplined, but they should have sufficient arms and ammunition to maintain a status of independence from any who might attempt to abuse them, which would include their own government."

It's a great quote; too bad Washington never actually said it. The actual quote is, "A free people ought not only to be armed but disciplined; to which end a uniform and well digested plan is requisite: And their safety and interest require that they should promote such manufactories, as tend to render them independent on others, for essential, particularly for military supplies" (First Annual Message to Congress 1790).

Doesn't have quite the same tone as the bogus quote you mentioned, Andrew. I hope the next time you come across a quote attributed to the founding fathers that sounds like it was written by an NRA spokesman, you'll check if it's authentic before repeating it.
JANSSON STEGNER, VIA E-MAIL

Andrew Criscione offers a quote from George Washington about the supposed need for a free people to arm themselves as a protection from abuse, even from their own government, and then follows that with a general quote, from the Militia Act of 1792, about all white males being part of the militia.

What Criscione neglects to say is: In 1794, George Washington called various militias into federal service to suppress the Whisky Rebellion, which involved an insurrection against perceived government abuse.

As for the "militia," the offered quote merely defines who can serve in one. ... In any event, the Act has been radically changed — first in 1862 and then most notably in 1903, which abolished the concept of the militia as it was known in 1789. Criscione also seems to suggest that Washington praised the concept of armed rebellion against the government of which he was president. It seems to me that, if the writer wants to talk about a "crash course," he should be the first one to take it.

Can home cooking save the Sixers' season from spinning out of control?

The Sixers will embark on a season-long, eight-game homestand beginning Saturday night against the Knicks.

That's good news, right?

Well, maybe in previous seasons.

The Sixers are a pedestrian 11-10 at home and just 17-25 overall, 3.5 games behind the Boston Celtics for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

After the Knicks' game, the Sixers will host the Grizzlies, Wizards, Kings, Magic, Pacers, Bobcats and Clippers. There's a mix of good teams and bad teams, but this much has become certain this season: The Sixers can't overlook anyone.

Nothing has come easy after last year's improbable run to the Eastern Conference semifinals. It's blatantly obvious that the Sixers need Andrew Bynum. If the All-Star center returns with healthy knees by the All-Star break (Feb. 15-17) the Sixers could receive a huge lift.

But there are no guarantees. They can't afford too many subpar performances or they'll be out of the playoff hunt by the time Bynum returns.

The players are keenly aware. They don't want to keep falling behind by double digits, but that's what has transpired in too many games recently.

"We have to come out with energy in the first quarter," forward Thaddeus Young said. "We have to get off to better starts. I don't know why it keeps happening. We talk about it all the time. We just have to do it. We have to come with the energy, otherwise we're down 10 just like that. It's hard to keep playing uphill, and we know that as players. Hopefully we'll be able to get that turned around fast."

In addition to quicker starts, the Sixers need to recapture momentum at home.

The fans are clamoring for things to cheer about on some maddening nights.

This eight-game stretch at home is the perfect opportunity to make up some lost ground in the playoff standings.

"The fans are so great here and we need to give them reasons to cheer early," said guard Nick Young. "They're behind us all the way. I think if we can have a great homestand, they'll be energized and so will we. We know how important this next group of games is for our season and where we want to go."

Show me the money

The Sixers aren't only hurting in the standings. The ownership group is also feeling it in their wallets.

According to Forbes magazine, the Sixers rank No. 22 out of 30 NBA teams in value. The franchise is worth $314 million, or 5 percent less than last season.

For the record, the L.A. Lakers top Forbes' list at a value of $900 million.

Unfortunately for the Sixers, the decline is affecting ticket sales. Seats in the Upper bowl were going for as low as two cents, per StubHub.

Metro found a ticket in the Upper Corner (row 209) for Monday's game vs. Memphis selling for 95 cents on StubHub.

Quiet Riot? Phillies could add Theriot to offseason wish list

Report cites Philly as landing spot for infielder • Possible insurance for aching Utley • Won World Series in 2011, 2012

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Theriot won a World Series ring last season in San Francisco, and another one the year prior in St. Louis.

Are the Phillies finished with their offseason shopping after adding Delmon Young to their outfield?

Last week, CBS columnist Jon Heyman reported that the Phillies could be interested in free agent Ryan Theriot in case Chase Utley misses significant time for the third straight spring. Theriot is a reliable utility infielder.

The prankster, who goes by the nickname, 'The Riot,' would welcome a move to Philly.

"Who wouldn't want to play for the Phillies," Theriot told Metro from his Louisiana home. "I would be more than fine with that. I love Charlie Manuel. You have a great ballpark and great fans."

Theriot knows something about winning, too, since he earned World Series rings in 2011 with St. Louis and in 2012 with San Francisco.

"I think the Phillies are going to be very tough next season," Theriot said. "They have the best pitching staff in baseball. They have a very good chance to win next season. Just watch."

Will Theriot be part of that winning?

"We'll see what happens," Theriot said. "There are other possibilities for me. There's a possibility with Cleveland and maybe even San Francisco."

Maybe teams should be lining up for Theriot's services since he seems to be a good luck charm.

"That's what I say," Theriot. "I've been on the last two World Series champions in a row. Who else can say that? Nobody. I think teams should line up for me. But I wouldn't mind it being the Phillies. That would be fun for me."
